Interpretation

- (ii) interests in an exchange traded fund which replicates or substantially replicates the composition of the index,

effected at the same time, or at as nearly the same time as practicable, in the ordinary course of trading on the same or another financial market for the purpose of obtaining a profit from the difference between the aggregated value of the securities or products and the value of the derivatives or interests, where the value of the offsetting purchase is equal to or greater than the aggregated value of the securities or products sold; or

(b) a purchase of securities or products which are represented in a particular financial market index effected in the ordinary course of trading on a financial market and substantially in accordance with the proportion in which the securities or products are represented in the index, together with an offsetting sale of:

- (i) derivatives issued over the index; or
- (ii) interests in an exchange traded fund which replicates or substantially replicates the composition of the index,

effected at the same time, or at as nearly the same time as practicable, in the ordinary course of trading on the same or another financial market for the purpose of obtaining a profit from the difference between the aggregated value of the securities or products and the value of the derivatives or interests, where the value of the offsetting sale is equal to or less than the aggregated value of the securities or products bought.

(8) For the avoidance doubt and without limiting the meaning of the definition of dual listed arbitrage transaction, if two financial markets are in different time zones, the purchase or sale (the first transaction) and the offsetting sale or purchase (the second transaction) is taken to have occurred at a time that is, so far as practicable, the same time if the second transaction is effected in a session of trading that:

(a) overlaps with; or

(b) occurs soonest after the close of:

the session of trading in which the first transaction was effected.”
