1. Background

APRA commenced a review of the regulatory capital framework for general insurers and life companies (LAGIC review) in 2010. The broad aims of the review were to:

- improve the risk sensitivity and appropriateness of the capital standards in general insurance and life insurance (including friendly societies); and
- where appropriate, improve the alignment of the capital standards across the industries that APRA supervises.

APRA has made a range of amendments to its prudential framework to give effect to the findings of the review. As a result of the changes, there is a common capital framework for required capital and eligible capital across general insurers and life companies. The minimum capital requirement is known as the Prudential Capital Requirement (PCR). This comprises a prescribed capital amount plus any supervisory adjustment determined by APRA. General insurers must at all times satisfy minimum requirements for the composition of their capital bases and ensure that the capital base exceeds the PCR.

2. Purpose and operation of the instruments

The purpose of making the instruments is to introduce new and amended reporting standards and to revoke existing reporting standards in relation to general insurers in order to implement the changes under the LAGIC review.

The implementation of the revised capital framework under LAGIC requires substantive changes to the reporting requirements for both general insurers and life companies. For general insurers, amendments to the methodology for calculating the prescribed capital amount are made. This includes the introduction of an explicit operational risk charge, revisions to the calculation of the asset risk charge, insurance concentration risk charge and asset concentration risk charge. The definitions of capital base and the categories of capital included in the capital base were also revised.

APRA has also taken the opportunity to make improvements to the reporting requirements of general insurers, by implementing a number of changes to enhance the general insurance publications. The timing of submission of annual returns and a small number of technical changes to data submission were also made.

For general insurers, the changes to reporting requirements arising from the LAGIC review are effected through the instruments.

The new reporting standards and associated reporting forms are issued under FSCODA. These reporting standards enable the reporting requirements of the revised prudential framework to take effect.

The collection of quarterly and annual data under the new general insurance prudential reporting requirements will commence for the first reporting period ending on or after 1 January 2013.

3. Consultation

APRA undertook consultation on the LAGIC review between May 2010 and October 2012, including four rounds of industry consultation, three technical papers and two quantitative impact studies.

- In addition to extensive consultation in relation to the prudential requirements, APRA released the following consultation materials in relation to the reporting requirements: June 2012 – Discussion paper ‘Review of capital standards for general insurers and life insurers – proposed revisions to reporting requirements’¹, draft versions of reporting forms and instructions, reporting standards and capital adequacy calculation workbooks and instructions;
- August 2012 – Letter to insurers ‘Additional proposed changes to the reporting standards’²; and
- October 2012 – Response paper ‘Review of capital standards for general insurers and life insurers – reporting requirements’³, final versions of all forms and instructions and reporting standards.

APRA has considered both formal and informal feedback from industry throughout the above multi-year process. Submissions received by APRA were broadly supportive of the changes. Issues considered to be significant or to have merit were incorporated into the revised capital framework.
