How to Make Application.—Applications to attend the examination must be made on the printed form which is available on written or personal request from the Commonwealth Public Service Inspector.

Applications Close.—Applications, which must be sent direct, not through the Department, must reach the Commonwealth Public Service Inspector in the State in which the applicant is permanently stationed not later than 20th March, 1957.

Applications received after 20th March, 1957, will be rejected unless the applicant has advised the Public Service Inspector with whom he lodged the application by letter or telegram which reaches him not later than that date, that he is forwarding an application and he has actually posted his application before or on that date.

The receipt of applications will not be formally acknowledged. If a candidate does not receive advice to attend the examination at latest ten days before the date of the examination he should at once communicate with the Public Service Inspector with whom he lodged the application, and at the same time furnish evidence of the posting of his application (including date, time and place).

Subjects of Examination.—The subjects of examination are—

1. SPELLING—

- Duration, 45 minutes.
- Maximum marks, 300; pass marks, 180.

Candidates will be required—

- to write out passages of continuous prose and/or sentences, containing misspelled and/or partially spelled but readily recognizable words, spelling correctly the misspelled words, and spelling fully and correctly the partially spelled words; and
- to spell fully and correctly in the spaces provided on the examination paper, partially spelled words in a printed list.

In both (a) and (b), comprehension as well as the candidate's ability to spell will be tested, as the recognition of the word must precede the actual spelling.

To assist the candidate, in (b) and where appropriate in (a), the meaning will be given (in brackets) after each partially spelled word.

Generally, however, the candidate's ability to cope with the examination in Spelling will depend upon his being able to spell and use correctly, the words contained in the spelling lists of the prescribed text-books.

In their preparation candidates should not only learn to spell these words; they should also know their meaning. Constant use of a dictionary is therefore essential.

As an aid to comprehension, particular attention should also be given to the sections of the prescribed text-book (Foster & Bryant: "A Graded Word-Book for Australian Schools"), which deal with homonyms, antonyms, nouns and their adjectives, verbs and their nouns, plurals, masculine and feminine forms of nouns, and verbs and their principal parts.

Text-books—

- Foster and Bryant: A Graded Word-Book for Australian Schools (Davies and Cannington, Newcastle),
- Secondary Students' Spelling Book (Whitcombe and Tombs), or Harris: 320 Daily Spelling Lists (Consolidated Press), or Muirden: The Commonwealth Spelling Book (The Hassell Press), or
New Syllabus Speller (Angus and Robertson).

For Reference—

Concise Oxford Dictionary.

2. ENGLISH.

- Duration 4 hours—Paper A (essay, précis writing, punctuation, letter writing, and appreciation of prose, 3 hours). Paper B (Analysis, and use of words) 1 hour.
- Maximum marks, 400 (Paper A, 300; Paper B, 100). Pass marks, 240.
- To obtain a pass in English, candidates must obtain an overall total of at least 240 marks.

Paper A.

Paper A will consist of three sections. Candidates will be required to study all sections.

Section 1.

Essay Writing.—Essays are a means of testing candidates' knowledge and also of assessing their capacity for self-expression. Essay writing requires the development of an adequate vocabulary and also certain techniques or skills.

They are either of the personal type as in the subject of English or are the means frequently adopted for reporting facts or developing arguments as in History and Economics. It is with the personal type of essay that students are concerned in this examination. Candidates will be given a choice of subjects, so that each may write on a theme within his own field of interest.

The essay requires the student after selecting his subject—

- to collect his thoughts and opinions on the subject, expressing his ideas correctly (grammar and syntax), and suitably (vocabulary);
- to arrange his thoughts, grouping sentences together which deal with one phase of the subject (paragraphs); and
- to develop his treatment of the subject in a logical sequence so as to arrive at a conclusion.

Preparation will require study and exercises in—

- (a) Vocabulary building, including the recognition of prefixes and affixes, simple Latin roots; grouping of words according to endings (affixes), e.g., -able, -ible, -ary, -ous, -eous, &c.; singulars and plurals, especially borrowings from other languages now in common use; collective nouns as names of groups, e.g., shoal, bevy, committee; synonyms, antonyms and homonyms.
- (b) Rules of syntax.
- (c) Punctuation, keeping in mind, after learning the use of the stops, that over-punctuation should be avoided and that the function of punctuation is to show up the meaning and not to patch up faulty composition.
- (d) Grammar.—Parts of speech as follows should be understood and readily recognized:—
 - Nouns: proper, common, abstract and collective.
 - Pronouns: personal, relative demonstrative, interrogative, and possessive.
 - Adjectives: descriptive, numeral, demonstrative, interrogative, and indefinite.
 - Adverbs: of time, place, manner, and degree.
 - Verbs: finite, infinite, transitive, intransitive, active, and passive.
 - Conjunctions: co-ordinate, and subordinate.

The examination will also require candidates to develop their powers of expression—

- (a) Expression depends upon the word, the sentence, and the paragraph. When writing an essay students should:—aim to use the right word in the right place; choose apt adjectives and strong verbs; where necessary use explanatory phrases to enhance meaning and description. To avoid the use of the wrong word, students should study words likely to be confused, e.g., allusion, illusion; eligible, illegible; credible, creditable, &c.
- (b) Variety in sentence construction is also important, short sentences and long sentences being suitably blended, due regard being paid to balance, emphasis, and unity.
- (c) Paragraphs should be real, sentences dealing with one phase or aspect of the subject being grouped together; students should also use variety in the beginning of paragraphs.
- (d) Finally, in their essays candidates should always aim at clearness of expression and simplicity of style; they should plan before writing and know clearly what they have to say.

Section 2.Précis Writing.—

- (a) Candidates should understand the meaning of précis writing, its use, and what is necessary to prepare a précis, including the value of an extensive vocabulary.
- (b) Dictionary work is essential; so too are exercises in the substitution of words for phrases, &c. Candidates should use their knowledge of grammar to aid them in discrimination; they should use principal clauses to give the main points and subordinate clauses to add the detail.
- (c) Rough notes are important as a guide in preparing a précis.
- (d) Précis of correspondence: use of an index should take the place of rough notes; précis should be written from an index.
- (e) Précis of minutes of meeting: use an index on similar lines to précis of correspondence.

Section 3.A. Punctuation.

Direct questions will be set which require the candidate to punctuate sentences or short passages of continuous prose.

In their preparation, it will be necessary for candidates to study carefully the chapters of the prescribed text-books which deal with punctuation, and, through practice, to acquire facility in applying accepted principles regarding the use of stops.

Candidates should aim at a clear understanding of the function of each stop. For example, the appropriate use of a hyphen in (b) changes the meaning of the following words:—

- (a) Old gold braid = old braid of a gold colour.
- (b) Old-gold braid = braid of the colour known as "old-gold".

and then

B. Letter Writing.

Your ability as officers of the Commonwealth Public Service, to write concise, clear, complete, correct, and courteous letters is a distinct advantage; on the other hand your inability to do this is a serious handicap.

As recommended in Section 3A (Punctuation), candidates should study carefully the chapters of the prescribed text-books which deal with letter writing, noting those conventions which make for correctness, and also those qualities that make a letter attractive as well as correct.

In their preparation, candidates should aim to acquire facility in writing Business Letters, Official and Semi-official Letters, and also Social Letters.

or

C. Appreciation of Prose.

Candidates will be required to read carefully a passage of prose and to answer direct questions on their content.

If appropriate to the passage, questions will also be set to test the candidate's ability to recognize figures of speech. These, though met with more frequently in poetry than in prose, are devices employed to achieve the effect of vividness and to hold the attention. In prose, figures of speech are generally used quite naturally and are part of the writer's style.

Candidates should study carefully the chapters of the prescribed text-books which deal with figures of speech.

PAPER B.

Paper B will consist of two sections, both of which are compulsory.

Section 1.

Analysis.—Analysis should be regarded as the dissection of sentences to show the functional relationships which exist among parts of the sentences.

These parts are of three kinds.

- (a) Words.
- (b) Phrases.
- (c) Clauses.

Candidates will not be asked to deal extensively with words or phrases in analysis but are advised to study the types and functions firstly of words and then of phrases in order that they may clearly understand the kinds and functions of clauses.

There is no easy road to success. Analysis calls for the exercise of reason more than the application of memorized "rules". Candidates are strongly advised, when preparing for the examination to adopt a questioning approach. They should ask "Is this a clause?" "Why is this a clause?" "What duty or function does this clause perform?" Only in this way will candidates develop confidence and certainty in analysis. The syllabus has been revised to emphasize the functional approach.

(a) Words (Parts of Speech)—

The identification and description of parts of speech is called "parsing". The following coverage will be an adequate basis for understanding phrases and clauses:—

(i) Nouns—

A noun is the name of anything (e.g., horse, honesty, Sydney, family).

It may be—

- (a) Subject of a verb.
- (b) Object of a verb.
- (c) Complement of a verb.

(ii) Verbs—

A verb is a word which indicates "doing", "being" or "having".

A finite verb has a subject.

There must be a finite verb and one only in each clause.

Candidates must therefore be able to recognize finite and infinite verbs and should know that some finite verbs have two or more words, e.g., Tom would have gone.

(iii) Adjectives—

An adjective adds to the meaning of a noun (e.g., the black horse), and not to a verb or adverb.

(iv) Adverbs—

An adverb adds meaning to a verb, an adjective or another adverb, e.g.—

- | | | |
|-------------------|----|-------------------------|
| With a verb | .. | I walked slowly. |
| With an adjective | .. | He is extremely lazy. |
| With an adverb | .. | I walked quite quickly. |

(b) Phrases—

Candidates will not be directly examined on their knowledge of phrases, but are strongly advised to study the use of adjectival and adverbial phrases. This will assist in the recognition and separation of clauses in analysis.

(c) Clauses—

A clause is a group of words which contains one finite verb—

- (i) Principal Clauses. (These make complete sense on their own. They are like small sentences. There must be at least one principal clause in a sentence.)

- (ii) Noun Clauses. (These do the work of a noun.)

Required to know—

- (a) Noun clause subject of a verb—
That he will be late is certain.
- (b) Noun clause object of a verb—
I know that he is efficient.
- (c) Noun clause object of a participle—
He stood there wishing that they would arrive.
- (d) Noun clause object of a preposition—
That is different from what I was told.

(iii) Adjectival Clauses—

An adjectival clause adds meaning to a noun or to a noun clause.

That is the man whom I saw.

Adjectival clauses are introduced by a relative pronoun, frequently "who", "whom" or "which". Candidates should learn that other words can be used as relative pronouns, e.g., "where" (That is the house where I was born) and "that". In particular, students should learn to distinguish between adjectival clauses and noun clauses both of which can be introduced by "that".

Required to know—

Adjectival Clause introduced by who, whom, whose, which, that, where, as (after "such" or "some") and other relative pronouns.

Relative pronouns—

(a) Subject of a verb.

(b) Object of a verb.

(iv) Adverbial Clause—

Adverbial clauses, like adverbs, add meaning to verbs, adjectives and other adverbs.

Required to know—

(a) Adverbial Clause of Reason: e.g., introduced by conjunctions like "because", "since", "as", "for".

(b) Adverbial Clause of Purpose: e.g., introduced by conjunctions like "in order that", "so that", "lest", "that".

(c) Adverbial Clause of Time: e.g., introduced by conjunctions like "when", "while", "after", "before", "till", "until", "since", "as", "as soon as".

(d) Adverbial Clause of Manner: e.g., introduced by "as".

(e) Adverbial Clause of Place: e.g., introduced by "where".

Candidates are warned against memorizing the conjunctions which usually introduce the various clauses. It will be observed that "as" can introduce adverbial clauses of reason, time and manner. Relying on rote memory instead of examining the functions of clauses will lead to incorrect answers.

At the examination the analysis will be submitted on a special form provided. The form previously used has been revised and contains columns for the following information only.

Clause.—The clause is to be entered in full.

Kind of Clause—e.g., Principal, noun, adjectival, adverbial (of time, purpose, &c.).

Function—e.g., qualifying or modifying part of sentence (to be stated). Noun clauses should be stated as "subject of . . ." or "object of . . .". No entry is required for a principal clause.

Verb.—Finite verbs only should be entered.

Subject—i.e., the subject of the verb entered in the previous column.

The set passage will be a short piece of continuous prose. Parenthetic matter will not be included.

Section 2.

Use of Words.—Candidates' preparation in this section will require study and drill as well as exercises in the following:—

- (i) Antonyms (including the use of prefixes in the formation of antonyms), synonyms, homonyms.
- (ii) Nouns and the adjectives derived from them, e.g., choir, choral.
- (iii) Verbs and their corresponding nouns; e.g., propose, proposal.
- (iv) Plurals of nouns, including irregular plurals and plurals of foreign words in common use, plurals of compound nouns, plurals which are the same as the singular, words with two plurals of different meaning.
- (v) Genders of nouns.

- (vii) Verbs and their principal parts.
- (viii) Preposition idioms.
- (ix) Correction of faulty sentences (with reasons for corrections).
- (x) Recognition of redundant words, &c.
- (xi) Expressing metaphorical phrases, &c., in plain speech.
- (xii) Recognition of the shades of meaning in groups of words similar but not the same in meaning, e.g., announce, intimate, inform, advise, &c. The use of such words in sentences so as to reveal the particular shade of meaning.

In the study of words, especially synonyms and antonyms, the student should use his dictionary and note well the distinctions between words of similar meaning; synonyms have the same general meaning, not the same meaning, e.g., efficient—able, qualified, competent, satisfactory, &c. This does not mean that any one word may be substituted for any other word. Each has its peculiar use. Strive for the word rather than a word.

When a new word is learned, the student should learn its opposite, its extensions to include the different parts of speech, e.g., change verbs, nouns, adjectives, into particles, abstract nouns, &c.

The student should study rules of syntax in conjunction with grammar. He should make one help the other. Rules are set out in the text-books recommended. Sentences for correction should be constantly revised. When a student has learned some new fact in grammar he should apply it to his general English so as to retain it.
