B. RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS AT THE AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

Applications are invited from permanent officers of the Commonwealth Service for Research Fellowships in 1966. The Fellowships will entitle Fellows to spend one year in a department of the Australian National University.

ELIGIBILITY.

Fellowships will be available to senior officers of substantial experience who would benefit from a period of reading and supervised writing on a research topic. The primary purpose of the Fellowships is not to enable officers to obtain a higher degree but to provide them with the opportunity to make a worthwhile contribution to a particular field of research. The field of research, chosen by the Fellow in conjunction with his department and the University, must be of interest and benefit to both the University and the Commonwealth Service.

SELECTION.

Applicants for Fellowships must first obtain sponsorship from their departments. Departments will submit nominations, which will be considered by a selection committee comprising representatives of the University, Treasury and the Board. Final selections are made by the Board.

BENEFITS.

Fellows will receive full salary for the period of the Fellowship. The University will pay costs of the Fellow's travel to Canberra, and may provide accommodation at normal charges for Fellows not resident in Canberra. If possible, single Fellows will live at University House, and married Fellows with families will be provided with furnished houses or apartments. Fellows engaged in research are entitled to attend seminar groups and discussions within the University in their general fields of interest. Successful officers will take up the Fellowship at the beginning of the academic year in March 1966.

CONDITIONS.

A Fellow will be required to produce a paper on his year's work at the University and to enter into a bond to remain in the Commonwealth Service for a period of three years after completion of the Fellowship.

The National University has furnished the following list of suggested research fields for 1966:

Research School of Physical Sciences.

The School can provide facilities for research work in low energy nuclear physics (Professor Titterton), in theoretical aspects of nuclear and particle physics (Professor Le Couteur), in some branches of geophysics, geochemistry and petrology (Professor Jaeger), in observational optical astronomy (Professor Bok), and in selected branches of mathematics (Professors Neumann and Mahler), in studies of collision processes of electrons in gases (Dr. Crompton) and in engineering physics (Mr. Blamey).

Research School of Social Sciences.

Demography (Professor Borrie): Economic, social and cultural aspects of the absorption of immigrants; immigration policy; studies relating to fertility, marriage and family structure, and to the changing age composition of the Australian population; evaluation of census techniques; population problems of Asia and the Pacific.

Economic History (Professor Butlin): Areas likely to be of most interest to Commonwealth Officers include Quantitative analysis of economic growth and development in Australia, including the comparative study with overseas countries. The work is at three levels, covering the preparation of statistical series of historical social accounting data, the interpretation of the data, and its use in analytical studies. The statistical data include employment and unemployment, quantum estimates of industry product, capital stock, public authority transactions, and analysis of foreign trade and investment since the First World War. Interpretative work is mainly devoted to quality change in price and quantum series and use of figures of aggregate output for welfare and productivity comparison. Analytical studies cover a wide field, including particular studies of the effect of a government activity on the character and direction of economic development of selected industries, the association between economic growth and capital inflow and the labour-capital productivity in Australia.

There is also opportunity for traditional and descriptive studies in economic history, including business and institutional histories.

Economics (Professor Swan): A suitable research project in many instances would be to take some episode or problem of public policy from the recent past or the present and to analyse its background and implications.

History (Professor Sir Keith Hancock): Members of the Department are currently engaged in research on Australian, Commonwealth, modern Indian and medieval history. Limited opportunities also exist for work in modern British and European history.

Law (Professor Sawyer): Federal Constitutional Law; Administrative Law; Private and Common Law (contracts, torts, &c.).

Political Science (Professor Parker): Historical development of a selected function of the Commonwealth Government; modes and problems of Commonwealth-State participation in one of the concurrent functions of government; possible scope for greater mobility between Government and private employment in the administrative field; how the Statutory Corporation form affects policy making and administration in any corporation; the formulation and administration of Australian tariff policy; legal problems of "extra-Constitutional" activities of the Commonwealth, e.g., in research, education, civil aviation control and facilities, regional development, labour relations, e.g., implementing of I.L.O. conventions, employment and vocational guidance services; public health policy; regional structure and administration of selected Commonwealth Departments, e.g., is the State unit the most convenient?, possible scope for delegation to departments of staffing functions under the Public Service Act; administrative problems arising from Public Service Arbitration.

Sociology (Professor Borrie): The interests of this new department are at the moment concentrated upon studies relating to occupational and social structure and mobility, urbanization, the professions, social institutions (e.g., social services, education) and the sociology of religion.

Statistics (Professor Moran): Time series analysis; problems of storage and queueing; population theory; theory of genetics.

Research School of Pacific Studies.

Anthropology and Sociology (Professor Stanner): Studies in the social administrative and judicial development of Papua and New Guinea; the position of aborigines and other ethnic groups in the Northern Territory and in the States.

Economics (Professor Arndt): The study of economic growth in under-developed areas, with particular reference to South-East Asia. Although the Department is primarily interested in building up systematic empirical knowledge of this area, scope exists for theoretical studies and work on Australia's economic relations with these regions.

Far Eastern History (Professor Fitzgerald): Japanese or Chinese diplomatic history.

Geography (Professor Spate): Comparative studies (including overseas comparisons) of industrialization; urbanism; Australian settlement history; agricultural geography in Australia and New Guinea.

International Relations (Professor Miller): Foreign policy of countries connected with Australia, especially the United States of America, the United Kingdom, Japan and other countries in Asia and the Commonwealth of Nations; studies of international organizations, including the United Nations and specialized agencies; Australian diplomatic experience; the politics of the Communist bloc; theories of international politics; problems of foreign aid and the effect of trade on international politics.
