L.S.
Common seal of the Australian Heritage Commission

The Register of the National Estate is an inventory of 'those places, being components of the natural environment of Australia, or the cultural environment of Australia, that have aesthetic, scientific or social significance or other special value for future generations, as well as for the present community'.

The Act provides that Commonwealth Ministers and Commonwealth agencies must not take any action which would adversely affect any place on the Register unless there is no feasible or prudent alternative, that damage is minimised where there is no such alternative, and that the Commission is informed and given time to comment. Registration has no legal effect on the actions of State Governments, Local Governments, or private individuals, corporations or institutions in the States.

The Commission has the following objectives for the Register:

- to make a comprehensive list of all the places in Australia which have heritage value;
- to educate Australians, by means of this list, about the natural and cultural history of their country;
- to give all decision makers, inside and outside government, objective information to help them make better decisions;
- to allow Commonwealth decisions and actions related to the National Estate to be taken as thoughtfully and carefully as possible.

A comprehensive Register will take many years to compile and will be a continuing process. All registrations will have the same status irrespective of the time of their entry. There are no gradings between different categories of places in the Register.
